“Il fiore perfetto è una cosa rara, se si trascorre la vita a cercarne uno non sarebbe una vita sprecata”

The last Samurai

Wabi - Nel dizionario giapponese è la sensazione che si riceve osservando qualcosa di semplice, di sobrio. E' un modo per calarsi nella natura attraverso le piccole cose, è una sensazione simile alla malinconia. E' uno dei modi tipici dei giapponesi di “sentire” la natura, di “sentire” la bellezza. Molte arti giapponesi negli scorsi millenni sono state influenzate dalla contemplazione dell'imperfezione. Questi antichi insegnamenti si trasmettono in modo trasversale a tutte le arti, e quindi anche alla decorazione d'interni, dove le pareti, vanno a ricoprirsi di un valore estetico “non finito”, in quanto artigianale, e quindi a sua volta imperfetto e allo stesso tempo bello in quanto tale.

“The perfect flower is a rare thing, a life time spent searching for it would not be a life spent in vain”

The last Samurai

In the japanese dictionary Wabi is the feeling experience in observing something simple and sober. It's a way to unite with nature through the small things, it is something similar to melancholy. It is a typical japanese way of “feeling” nature, “feeling” beauty. Various japanese arts through the centuries have been influenced by the observation of imperfection. These ancient teachings are transmitted to all art forms, therefore also to the interior decoration where the walls are vested with an aesthetic value which, being artisanal is “non finite” and imperfect, and at the same time, beautiful for no other reason than its imperfection.

The last Samurai

Wabi - dans le dictionnaire japonais c'est l'impression qu'on a en observant les choses simples, sobres. C'est une façon de se projeter dans la nature grâce aux petites choses, une sensation semblable à la mélancolie. C'est une des façons des Japonais de « sentir » la nature, de « sentir » la beauté. Beaucoup des arts japonaises des dernières millénaires ont été influencées par la contemplation de l'imperfection. Ces anciens enseignements se trouvent transversalement dans toutes les arts, et donc dans la décoration des intérieurs aussi. Les murs ont une valeur esthétique « non fini » puisqu'ils sont artisanales mais au même temps sont beaux exactement parce-qu'ils sont imparfaits.

The last Samurai

Wabi: In dem japanischen Wörterbuch steht als das Gefühl, wenn man was Einfaches und Schlichtes betrachtet, wenn man in die Natur eintaucht. Es ist ähnlicher zu der Sehnsucht. Für die Japaner ist es typisch so die Natur und die Schönheit zu fühlen. Viele japanische Kunsttendenzen sind in der vergangenen Jahrtausend durch die Betrachtung der Unvollkommenheit beeinflusst worden. Diese Tendenzen werden quer in aller Kunstarten übertragen, auch in der inneren Einrichtung, in den die Wände einen ästhetischen „ unvollkommenen “ Wert bekommen, da dieser von Handarbeit herkommt, und dadurch schön wird.
